I am a little concerned that Amec might shut down steam before we even have written responses to our comments on the EBR workplan in hand. The call last week was pretty exhausting. I'm not sure what more we can say at this point until we have the call to go over the next round of data from pressurization to compare. I am not convinced that continuing steam at this point would be less productive than starting EBR. But understand this is being run according to budget more than anything else. Perhaps we could do a joint letter stating that we don't approve SEE shutdown before the EBR workplan is approved? And get management to sign it?

Do ADEQ and EPA need to issue a joint agency, simple single page statement/letter saying extend the SEE or SEE okay to shut down, or are we all waiting until after 1st call on Feb. 29 or after the 2nd call on March 8? Do EPA and ADEQ need to have a pre-meet before the 29th?
